WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

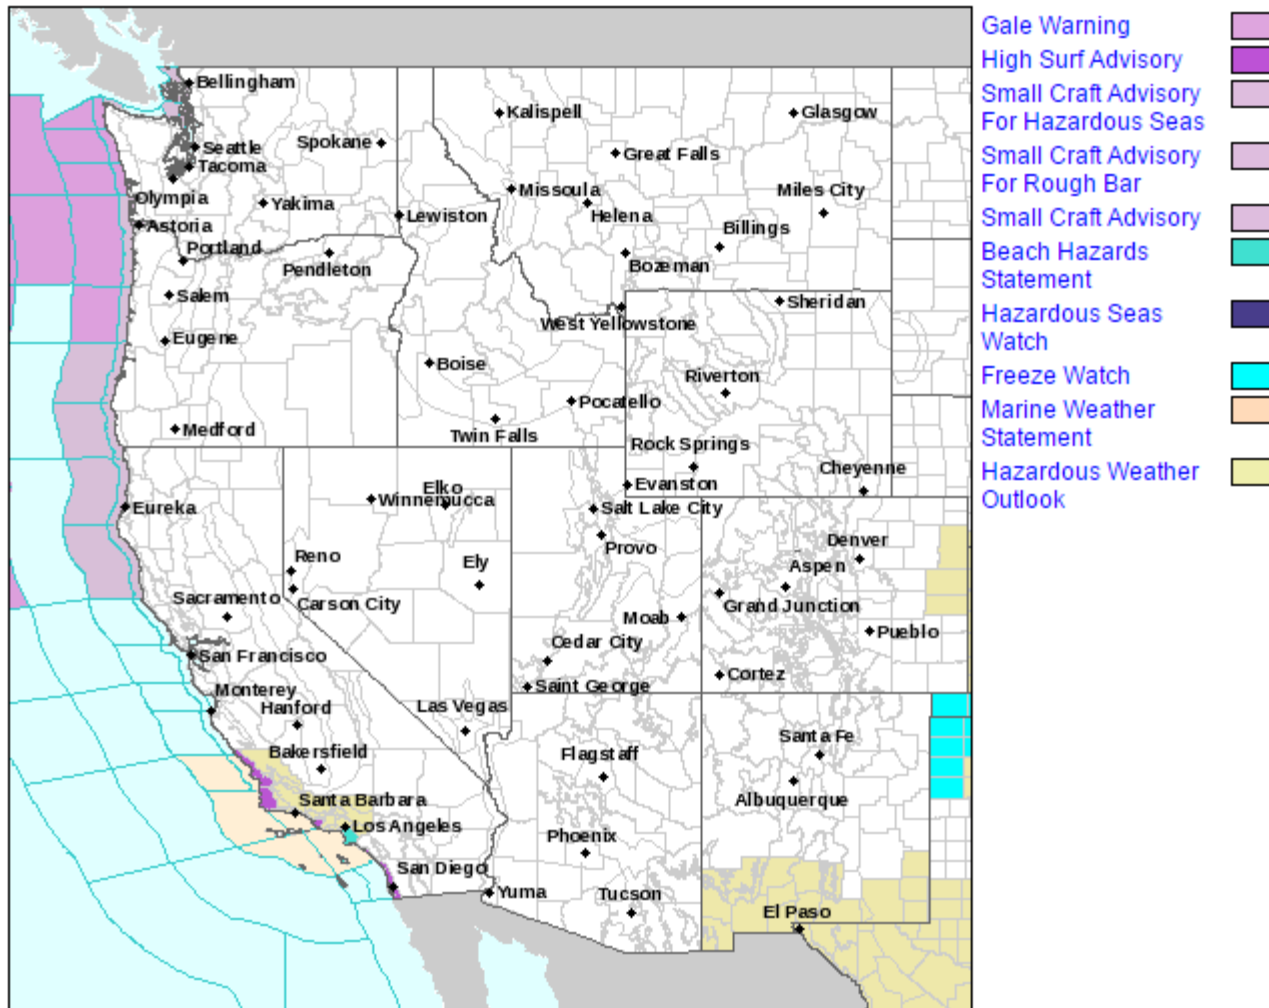

An unsettled weather pattern will continue over the next 7 days, although conditions will generally be without precipitation until later Friday. There will be a system that affects the far northwest corner of the North Coast Tuesday night into Wednesday with a bit of light precipitation there. Otherwise, for the workweek, expect variable amounts of cloudiness for the next few days, then Wednesday and Thursday should be mostly sunny and quite mild across Northern California. More clouds and light rain are expected to show up Friday, followed by variable cloudiness Saturday and another moist system arriving Sunday with light precipitation for most areas again. Wednesday and Thursday will be the warmest days this week with a little above normal temperatures in a lot of areas. The warmest inland areas will be 70-75. In spite of all the weather systems coming in, no strong winds are expected.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Strong and gusty east winds across Riverside and San Diego Counties Tuesday morning through Thursday morning. A strong ridge of high pressure over California will bring well above normal temperatures to Southern California through Thursday. Maximum temperatures will be in the 60s to low 70s across the mountains and mid 70s to upper 80s in the valleys today, with mid 60s to mid 70s across the mountains and mid 80s to mid 90s in the valleys of Southern California Tuesday through Thursday. Minimum humidity will be mainly between 15% and 30% away from the San Joaquin Valley through Thursday. East winds of 15 to 30 mph with gusts to 50 mph will surface mainly across Riverside and San Diego Counties Tuesday morning through Thursday morning. Elsewhere, there will be local gusty offshore winds across Southern California and light winds across Central California. The ridge of high pressure will weaken Friday and Saturday bringing a few degrees of cooling and slightly higher humidity. The ridge will become strong once again starting Sunday causing temperatures to become well above normal. At this time, winds look to be light with this next strengthening of the ridge.
